NEW CITY CEMENT MIXER GOES INTO DRY DOCK

Until Makers Come and Make it Work—Secretary Instructed to Advise Money By-Laws

Ald. Picard, in the absence of Mayor May, again presided last night at the meeting of the council in the city hall. Present, Aldermen Latta, Calhoun, Griesbach, Bellamy; Commissioners Kinnaird and Hargreaves and Mr. Collins.

Tenders will be called for the erection of a hospital. This action was concluded a week ago in committee of the whole.

A lengthy petition was submitted from several ratepayers praying for an extension of the pound bylaw, and complaining of annoyance from cattle running at large getting into their gardens, upsetting their water barrels, and disturbing their rest at night.

In discussion on this question, Alderman Latta thought the time had come in this city to extend the pound bylaw. The matter was put in the hands of the street and parks committee to consider the whole question of the boundaries of the pound district and report.

Another petition, signed by twenty-eight ratepayers in the vicinity of Namayo avenue was submitted, wherein they protested against the proposed spur line from the C. N. R. track down to Cushing's and Fraser's mills, on the ground that it would cut off access to the property, depreciate its value and endanger life, since this was a congested residential district. The council wanted to know if these petitioners were owners of the property abutting the lane, where it was proposed to lay the track, and it was pointed out that such owners had the remedy in their own hands and no action on the part of the council was necessary. All they had to do to gain agreement granting the right to the parties asking to construct the track.

Mr. N. F. Harbottle was accorded the privilege of using his tent on Jasper avenue until the building and offices on the corner of Jasper and Second streets is finished.

The question of those buildings on Namayo that project beyond the street line was up again. Mr. Coleman wrote asking time to remove his building, stating he was willing to repair the walk when he had moved his building back.

Commissioner Kinnaird was of the opinion that any extension of time should be very definite and not too long. In reply to a question City Solicitor Beck said that no difficulty could arise in forcing the owners to remove the buildings unless they remained in their present position for twelve years. No difficulty could arise in the transfer of the property, but he was of the opinion that the city could not force the owners to repair the default in the walk when the buildings were moved back.

Ald. Picard thought when the owners signed the petition to have the walk improved they should assume and discharge every responsibility incurred by that act. The council was too lenient and got abused for it, and he was going to stand it no longer.

Ald. Latta said the council would do well to be lenient, as many who signed the petition for the new walk were not aware at the time that their property was over the street line. Ald. Bellamy did not wish to impose a hard-

BUSINESS MEN DISCUSS RATES

Former Rates Can Only Be Obtained By Improvements.

The council of the board of trade and other prominent men of the city met in the council chamber yesterday afternoon, for the purpose of discussing and considering the new tariff of insurance rates which has just been brought into effect throughout the Northwest, and also possible means of securing reductions in the basic rate. Acting Mayor Picard presided. The gathering was a sequel to the informal meeting of the insurance men of the city on Monday morning.

Through the press report of the meeting of Monday some misunderstanding has arisen as to the new rates. Mr. Birch was present yesterday afternoon and in full gave the explanation of the new system of rating. Under the new system each city and town has a standard minimum rate, a basic rate. This minimum rate was made up under the following considerations, the fire protection, water supply, fire limits, fire brigade, etc. The basic rate for Edmonton had been fixed at $1. This was the key rate for the city mercantile property. Upon this each property was rated individually, and charged for according to the schedule or tariff. Formerly there had been no fixed minimum rate, and various classes of business property had various basic rates. Now there was to be the one minimum rate for all mercantile property, to which would be added the charges on the individual property according to the schedule. The rates on a good many properties in the city would be an increase from the old rates, but others, again, would be reduced. Under the old rating owners had little opportunity of reducing their individual rates by improvements. Now they were enabled to see exactly how their property was rated and how the charges were made up, and also how by improvements they could reduce their rates.

Mr. Birch also pointed out how the minimum city basic rate could be reduced materially by the city making certain improvements. He spoke first of the condition of the streets and said that in the east end in places, the condition of the streets were such that it was difficult for fire engines to make a quick passage along them. By having the principal streets paved the basic rate could be reduced by at least two cents. Then there were many of the hydrants in the city which did not have steam attachment. The city permitted frame buildings to go up in the congested portions. Improvements should be made in the fire limit ordinance. Mr. Birch showed a photo of a brick block in Brandon, in the rear of which frame buildings had been built. Fire which started in the frame building had succeeded also in destroying the brick block. Such conditions were also present in Edmonton today.

Also a considerable reduction could be obtained by the installation of a fire alarm system. With these various improvements the basic rate could very probably be reduced to that of Calgary, 75c.

W. H. Clark thought that as Mr. Birch was a specialist, he could give advice as to the increase or addition to the fire limits. Mr. Clark also wished to know if the city would receive further consideration in the reduction of the rate if the fire brigade were paid men on duty all the time. He thought that there should be a west end fire hall, as it was a long pull for the fire teams to the west end. Mr. Birch said that the fire limit should be in his estimation, take in both sides of the main street and also the street to the station. In fact two blocks on both sides of these streets would not be too great a limit. With regard to the fire brigade, some consideration would be given for a paid brigade of twelve men, although it was to be regretted that these men were stationed in one place. If a west end station were to be installed with sufficient apparatus and men in charge, he would recommend a reduction in the basic rate.

G. R. F. Kirkpatrick of the Imperial Bank, said that the rates had been increased not only on bad risks, but also on first class buildings. He said that the rate on the building now occupied by the Imperial Bank had formerly been 75 cents but was now increased to $1.25.

Mr. Birch admitted that that was the case with a good many of the properties in the city, but said under the new system the rate could be reduced on nearly all the properties to what it had formerly been on those properties by improvements which were specified in the schedule. Besides with the Casualties to date are reported at 500.

NASTY ROW AT OLD QUEBEC.

(Special to The Bulletin.)
Quebec, July 25.—A most dastardly crime was committed in this city last night, and as a consequence the bodies are now lying at the morgue. Three soldiers in khaki made their appearance on the cross wall of Dalhousie street and challenged some of the crew of the schooner J.M. Taylor from Barbadoes, unloading molasses at the wharf to come up and fight.

The challenge was at first unheeded but the soldiers carried insults to such a point that some of the crew went there. A general row then started on the wharf a short distance from the schooner, where soldiers used their belts and buckles to advantage. One of the latter gave a whistle when other soldiers put in an appearance. The sailors ran towards the schooner. One of them, Thomas Powers, was stabbed in the back as he ran, and fell into the water. Another, William Tver, who followed, as well as a sailor from the Empress of Britain. Both were drowned. This morning detectives landed Privates Dominick Griggan, 20 years of age and Edouard Lapointe 18, and Whiggins 23; all members of the R. C. C.

REQUISITION BY JUDGE HARVEY

Asks City to Pay Dr. McGibbon's Counsel Fees.—Request Laid Over

With his report on the Isolation hospital inquiry Judge Harvey also made a gentle requisition that the fees of Dr. McGibbon's counsel be paid by the city as the investigation was for the public welfare and it was right that the facts should be known. The amount recommended as counsel's fees was $250.

Ald. Bellamy said there had been an attempt to hear the investigation before the council and they had been balked by Dr. McGibbon's counsel. The amount was excessive and they were not entitled to pay it.

Ald. Griesbach replied that if the council was balked it was their own fault. They played into the hands of Dr. McGibbon as this advisers when they so hastily promised to pay Dr. Braithwaite's counsel fees. "This council is to blame for carrying the investigation before the judge at all," said the speaker. Ald. Bellamy thought the charge made was so serious that the council were justified. "The judge has gone into a little diplomatic report to find out what everyone already knew. The experience is worth what it is going to cost," said Ald. Latta.

This is what it is going to cost.—Judge's fees $151, stenographer's fees $300, witness fees $88, Dr. McGibbon's counsel $250; total $849.

Ald. Latta—"It is hard for a man who is not a Philadelphia lawyer to know what to do."

Then the council appealed to the city solicitor to guide them in their bewilderment to which the solicitor replied it would be expedient to pay it. After a deal more desultory talk they decided to file the requisition.

C. N. R. WON OUT

Winnipeg Free Press: Local officials of the Canadian Northern declined to make any statements this morning regarding the purchase of the Regina & Long Lake Railway by the C. N. R. Company. They would neither deny nor confirm the announcement made in the Free Press, but did state that if they could not say anything the intuition of the reporter might enable him to make a pretty correct guess.

That the road has passed into the hands of the C.N.R. there is no doubt and that the company will be operating the line just as soon as they can get possession of it, which will be after the customary formalities of giving notice have been complied with, and certainly before the year's crop begins to move. The Regina & Long Lake road, it appears was owned by certain English capitalists who own large blocks of Canadian Northern bonds, and this accounts for the C.N.R. getting control of the property.

As a piece of commercial strategy the purchase of the road is of great importance to the C.N.R. with their line now under construction between Brandon and Regina, they will have a belt of rails around Manitoba and Saskatchewan which with feeders will enable them to bid for a share of traffic throughout an immense and productive area. It will also form a valuable link in connection with the company's Hudson's Bay line which is now being built. Four or five years ago the R. & L. L. was not regarded of any account as a money maker, but it is estimated that this year there will be 6,000,000 bushels of wheat shipped from points along it between Regina and Prince Albert. It will now be seen that the property is very valuable for local traffic alone.

The acquisition of the road by the C.N.R. will be of great disappointment to the C.P.R. people, who it is understood were endeavoring to secure it. In fact there is a bit of grim humor in connection with the deal. Recently Mr. Wray, at Prince Albert, discussed with the business men of Prince Albert the intention of the C.P.R. with respect to the future operations of the road. At the same time General Superintendent Brown, of the C.N.R. was making an inspection of the road for his company, so that when Mr. Wray was talking with the Prince Albert citizens the line belonged to the C.N.R.

FULL REPORT OF JUDGE HARVEY IN ISOLATION HOSPITAL INQUIRY

JOURNALIST LOST HIS MONEY

C. W. Dawson, a Guest at the Windsor Lost Belt Containing $180.

Coningsby William Dawson, B.A., graduate of Merton College, Oxford, correspondent of the London Times, England arrived in the city on Saturday and registered at the Windsor. He wore a light grey suit and a greyedora. He also wore a belt beneath his coat, containing as he now claims $180.

Yesterday morning the belt disappeared. At least when Mr. Coningsby had occasion to go after the belt for a little of the cash, it was not in its accustomed place. He exclaimed to the clerk at the hotel that he could not have fastened the belt properly and it had detached itself from his person and been lost upon the street. To the police he told a story with a little more to it, and Sergt. Tidbury immediately went on a hunt for the lost cash.

Yesterday morning previous to the journalist mentioning his loss to the clerk at the hotel, a young man walked into the counter and mentioned to the clerk that he had found some money on the sidewalk at the door of the hotel. The clerk was busy engaged in waiting upon customers and before he had an opportunity of obtaining the young man's name, he walked away, evidently supposing the clerk knew him. Since then the clerk has been unable to find whomever the young man was and the journalist is still employing the police on a search for his bunch of greenbacks. If the young man was and the journalist name with the clerk of the Windsor hotel or with Sergt. Tidbury of the city police, the minds of all concerned would be greatly relieved.

Verbatim Report Which Was Read at the Meeting of the City Council Last Night.

To the Council of the City of Edmonton:

Pursuant to your resolution dated the 5th day of June, 1906, requesting me to make an inquiry into and concerning certain charges made in the public press by Doctor Donald McGibbon and W. Asher to the effect that during the months of April and May last the accommodation and materials afforded to patients at the Civic Isolation Hospital were of a kind unfit for such patients, that some of the nurses and attendants were incompetent and negligent and the supervision insufficient, and in particular that it was by reason of the improper accommodation and materials afforded him and the incompetence and negligence of nurses and attendants and the want of proper supervision that one Bernard Asher, a patient in the said hospital, came to his death on the 21st of May last, I made an appointment for the purpose of proceeding with the said inquiry. I was thereupon attended by counsel on behalf of the city and Dr. McGibbon, one of the parties making the charges, and took the evidence on oath of all witnesses who were produced before me both in support of and against the said charges as well as of several witnesses whom I thought advisable to hear.

In the result there was given before (Continued on Page Five)

CAR CRASHED DOWN CANYON

(Special to the Bulletin)
Nelson, B.C., July 20.—A buffet car on the Great Northern train from Spokane to Nelson, was derailed on a high trestle at Beaver Creek, near the boundary and crashed down the canyon last evening, killing four and injuring seven. The wreck is one of the worst in the history of British Columbia. The train was filled with Nelson, Kaslo and Rossland people and these towns were in a fever of excitement last night until the extent of the disaster was known. The dead are: Judge Townsend, of Rossland; M. D. McKinn, pursed of the G. N. B. steamer Kaslo; W. J. Smith, saloon keeper, Kaslo; and one unidentified miner from Spokane. The injured are: Mrs. W. B. Cole, Nelson; Miss Wrangell, Cranbrook; Louis Bergeron, Stillwater, Minn.; Peter Charles Summers, Spokane; Edward Jones, colored cook on the buffet car; Conductor Ingerham and brakeman Paden.

Business Men Discuss Rates

new basis the charges on a first class brick building with good walls would be reduced.

Mr. Clark said that formerly the owners never knew what they could get from the underwriters, but now they were in a position to know exactly what they were being charged for and what they could do to get reductions on their rates. As he understood it, this was the first time that the rating had been put upon a systematic basis. It was not so much the reducing of the rates as it was the establishing of a better system of rating.

Mr. Birch explained that formerly the rating had been done according to different classes of property. In making up the new system the experience of the past years with the system of classifying had been taken into consideration and it was found that a good many of the classes had been rated too low. The theory of the new system was that each class pay for itself.

Mr. Dowsett said that in order to get the rates on property down to what they had formerly been it would be necessary to make these improvements.

K. W. McKenzie said that the city had a good fire limit ordinance, but it had not been firmly adhered to. The council had several times set aside the ordinance, and their policy regarding fire limits to favor one or two parties. The city could not expect to have good rates if the council was not prepared to finally fix its policy. He was glad to have Mr. Birch there to support his view.

Ald. Picard said that it would be possible to ask a man to move his frame building out of the fire limits, and expect him to do so at a moment's notice. Mr. McKenzie said that it was a question of asking property owners to remove their frame buildings, but that it was a question of sticking to the ordinance. There had been frame buildings put up where they should not have been allowed.

Others present thought that the limiting of frame buildings would force better construction.

The meeting was closed with a vote of thanks to Mr. Birch for his explanations and advice. Mr. Birch also made the important announcement that the basic rate of detached frame dwellings for the whole city had been reduced from 60 to 45 cents, the same rating as that which applied on dwellings in the city of Calgary.

MONOPOLY VERSUS COMPETITION

Calgary Herald.—Joseph C. McDonald of the Calgary Herald and Mail- ing company interviewed the Herald last night on the subject of the C.P.R. tariffs to and from Calgary.

"Mr. McDonald contends that there is eminent unfairness in the cessation of a back rate from Edmonton, while the same favor is denied to Calgary. This had been conceded to Calgary until August, 1904, but since that time there had been no jobber's tariff on the Swift Current-Calgary division.

"The rates between Calgary and Medicine Hat prior to August, 1904 had been as follows:
1st class: 35 cents a hundred.
2nd class: 32 cents a hundred.
3rd class: 26 cents a hundred.
4th class: 19 cents a hundred.
5th class: 17 cents a hundred.
The rates at present are:

1st class: 70 cents.
2nd class: 59 cents.
3rd class: 47 cents.
4th class: 35 cents.
5th class: 31 cents.

"This is on a prairie section and means the transportation charges over 180 miles.

"Between Edmonton and Calgary on the back rate conceded to the capital a distance of 200 miles, the rates are as follows:

1st class: 53 cents.
2nd class: 45 cents.
3rd class: 37 cents.
4th class: 34 cents.
5th class: 24 cents.

"Mr. McDonald is of the opinion that this comparison shows an unfair attitude towards the city of Calgary.

"He makes a comparison also of the tariffs given to Regina and those allowed to Calgary.

"From Regina to Medicine Hat, a distance of 303 miles, the following rates prevail:

1st class: 50 cents a hundred.
Second class: 43 cents.
3rd class: 36 cents.
4th class: 29 cents.
5th class: 24 cents.

"From Calgary to Swift Current the best rate is:

1st class: 1.01 a hundred.
2nd class: 84 cents.
3rd class: 68 cents.
4th class: 58 cents.
5th class: 45 cents.

"On the mountain division the rate from Calgary is enlarged still more. From Calgary to Slocan Junction which is 308 miles the rates are as follows:

1st class: 107.
2nd class: 91 cents.
3rd class: 74 cents.
4th class: 59 cents.
5th class: 53 cents.

"It will be remembered of course that there is always a difference between the mountain and the prairie divisions in the transportation charges and the freight tariffs.

"The C.P.R.'s contention with regard to the back rates is that between Strathcona and Red Deer a jobber's back rate is not conceded, but that the goods shipped on the C.N. from the east to Edmonton are distributed by this tariff.

"In any case Edmonton is a competitive point, and Calgary has not yet that distinction."

Assuming the figures to be correct the granting of a back rate to the shippers of Edmonton over the C. & E. and the refusal of a back rate to the shippers of Calgary over the main line to Swift Current illustrate simply the difference between railway monopoly and railway competition. The C.P.R. enjoys the monopoly of the trade of Calgary, quite regardless of the treatment it may accord to the people of Calgary; it enjoys just that portion of the trade of Edmonton which it can secure by cheap rates and satisfactory service. In consequence the C.P.R. may or may not, as it sees fit, grant a back rate to Calgary over the Swift Current division; but if it declined to give Edmonton shippers a back rate over the C. & E. Edmonton shippers could very well retaliate by withdrawing their eastern traffic absolutely from the C. P. R. The loss of this traffic would be of infinitely more consequence than the reduction on back shipments over the C. & E. and it does not argue any peculiar friendliness for Edmonton that under these circumstances the back rates are granted.

That in making these rates the C.P.R. was governed solely by the necessities of the case and not by any sentiment of favoritism for Edmonton is clearly shown by a comparison of the back rates from Edmonton over the C. & E. and the local rates from Regina to Medicine Hat over the main line. From Edmonton to Calgary is about 200 miles and from Regina to Medicine Hat is 303 miles, yet the shipper in Edmonton by the back rate on the C. & E. pays on the average more than $2.00 per hundred more than the Regina jobber who sells in Medicine Hat. Allowing for the difference in distance the Regina shipper has an advantage of about $3.00 per hundred over the Edmonton shipper using the back rates on the C. & E. certainly not a mark of unusual friendship for Edmonton.

Moreover, according to the Herald, the C.P.R.'s defence is that "Between Strathcona and Red Deer a jobber's back rate is not conceded, but that the goods shipped on the Canadian Northern from the east to Edmonton are distributed by this tariff." This might well be looked into by the local board of trade and a comparison made with the shipping rates granted Calgary merchants over the C. & E. It is just possible that the so-called "back rates" from Strathcona and Edmonton over the C. & E. are of the nature of a penalty placed on the jobbers of these towns who import via the C.N.R. and in favor of the merchants of Calgary, who per force import per C.P.R. This possibility is emphasized by the fact that the shipping rates over the C. & E. from Calgary are not quoted by the Herald in this general round up.

The rates quoted from Calgary eastward and from Regina westward lack all semblance of comparison and indicate that the C.P.R. deliberately or with a remarkable coincidence has fixed its freight rates in a manner calculated to cut the Calgary jobbers absolutely out of competition with the Regina shippers in the territory east of Medicine Hat. Reasonableness and equity in rates will only be assured to Calgary merchants when Calgary has railway competition but a degree of relief might be secured by an aggressive campaign by the business men affected and by the press. But while the Herald's informant appears to have a good case he has consulted a poor advocate for his cause. However much the C.P.R. may discriminate against the interests of Calgary its tender feelings are not likely to be wounded by any onslaught from the Calgary Herald.

me evidence by all of the attendants and nurses of the said hospital during the period referred to and all of the patients who were in the hospital at that time and all of the physicians who attended patients there during that time with one or two exceptions where the persons were not in Edmonton, and in addition a considerable number of other witnesses including the father and mother of the said Bernard Asher, all of which evidence having been taken in shorthand has been transcribed and is submitted with this report.

The evidence establishes that at the commencement of the period of time mentioned in the resolution the civic isolation hospital referred to consisted of a one-story frame building in which were housed patients suffering from diphtheria and from erysipelas and a tent of canvas for scarlet fever patients. These patients were charged by the city for the expenses incurred in their care and treatment.

A considerable amount of expert evidence was given as to the suitability of a tent for hospital purposes, and a reasonable conclusion from the various opinions would seem to be that the advantages in the use of pureness of air with ease of ventilation which naturally exist in the case of a tent are very useful if they can be dissociated from the common accompaniments of danger of draughts, dampness and variation of temperature, all of which the testimony showed are to be particularly avoided in the case of a person suffering or recovering from scarlet fever.

It was abundantly clear from the evidence that all of these dangers existed in connection with this scarlet fever tent, and in my opinion it was absolutely unfit for the purposes for which it was used. While the weather was fine there were no disadvantages arising from its use; but when the weather was bad, as it was for several days while the patient Bernard Asher was there, it furnished no proper protection. The rain came through in several places, and the evidence of one of the attendants who clearly showed his desire to put the case in as favorable a light as he could was that to keep the patients from getting wet in their beds while it was raining he put extra blankets and newspapers on the beds and moved the beds away from where the rain was dripping.

There was no thermometer in the tent where the nurse could tell what the temperature was, and Mr. Main stated that a thermometer would have been of no use since, there being no door but only a flap, the wind and air coming in from outside would have kept it constantly varying.

There was a practical unanimity of opinion among the medical witnesses that warmth and avoidance of chill are very necessary in the case of scarlet fever patients, and for that reason I am of opinion that the tent was especially unfit for patients suffering from that disease.

It is perfectly true, as pointed out by counsel for the city, that being only a temporary hospital one should not expect the completeness in furnishings and appliances and general equipment that one would find in a regularly constituted hospital; but it is my opinion that the city, having undertaken the responsibility of providing accommodation, is in duty bound to see that necessities for safety and reasonable comfort should be provided though many of the conveniences and luxuries may be absent.

It is perhaps a little hard to say whether certain things are necessary or not; but in any event, outside of the conditions and structure of the tent, the appliances and the equipment and the surrounding conditions were, to say the least, of a very crude character; and it does not appear to me to be an answer that a patient need not go to the hospital unless he wishes. The ratepayers have a right to expect that where hospital provision is made it will be at least fairly adequate.

I do not know that any good object will be served by my dealing with this portion of the enquiry in any further detail, although it was dealt with very minutely in the evidence; and I will therefore leave it and proceed to the other portions of the enquiry; but I may say before passing that it appeared that Dr. Braithwaite, the Medical Health Officer, had made frequent recommendations and attempts to have a proper hospital erected.

The evidence does not satisfy me that any of the attendants or nurses were negligent. They all, I think, without exception performed their duties to the best of their ability and almost without exception they had at most times more to do than their regular duties of doing properly. Mr. Main, on whom under the Medical Health Officer, was thrown the duty of looking after the hospital, had also other duties which were sufficient to take up all of his time; and the grounds for complaint regarding the supplies of food, medicine, etc., which arose at times were in my opinion due not to his incompetence or to his unwillingness to do his duty, but simply to his inability to perform the duty of two men. In my opinion he was neither incompetent nor negligent. The only nurse who was qualified and competent was Mervley; but after having been kept on duty night and day till he was worn out, his rate of pay was reduced because he was given assistance, and he then left. The other nurses, with the exception of Dr. G. Sullivan, were not qualified and did not profess to be qualified nurses. They had had some slight experience which was no doubt useful but not such as to make them competent to be left in charge of a critical case. They appear, however, to have done as well as they could be expected to do with their limited knowledge and experience.

The Medical Health Officer stated that he could not get competent nurses and had to take such as he could get. One can quite understand that at times it may be necessary to accept a person not fully qualified for want of some one better; but it appears to me that competent nurses might possibly have been secured within a reasonable time if an effort had been made instead of waiting for them to come. That, however, would have involved the expenditure of money and I am free to admit that the Medical Health Officer had some ground for doubting whether it would have been authorized.

The other nurse was Dr. O'Sullivan, an Irish physician, by his training and education qualified for the duties of a nurse but by his habits of life wholly unfit at the time he was employed. He told Dr. Braithwaite, the Medical Health Officer, at the time of his employment that he had been a hard drinker and wanted to reform, and an opportunity to recover himself, and promised that he would not drink. Such a person in my opinion is the last person to be employed as a nurse whose slightest neglect may cause the loss of human life. He was employed, got drunk on the liquor which was to be used for the patients, and in that condition went down town without disinfection, was suspended by Main and reinstated by Dr. Braithwaite. One slip is all that is proved, and there is no evidence to satisfy me that his weakness caused any serious injury to any of the patients, but that fact cannot in my opinion justify Dr. Braithwaite in engaging him and keeping him. One may play with fire and not get burned, but it is a very dangerous performance and, as of very great risk. I do not think that Dr. Braithwaite's motives were other than good or that he realized the possible consequences of his action; but in my opinion his kindness of heart in his desire to assist a fallen comrade overcame his common sense and led him to appoint a man who at that time should not have been appointed. I am only speaking of the time of first employment for there was evidence that Dr. O'Sullivan had been taking anti-alcoholic medicine and at the present time, as far as appears, he may be quite safe and free from the influence of drink.

I now come to the consideration of the character of the supervision, and I am of opinion that the charge that this was insufficient has been substantially proved. Dr. Braithwaite apparently did not consider it his duty to exercise any supervision of his own initiative although your resolution states that the hospital was conducted under his supervision. He seems to have considered himself more as a person to whom complaints or requests could be made than as having a duty himself to see that everything was as it should be as to correct wrongs rather than to prevent them. I am not prepared to say that he was in this regard in any way remiss in his duty. As he said, he was a busy man with his own practice; and as far as the evidence shows, he may not have been expected to do any more than he did, but whether he did all his duty required him to do or not, it did not require an effective supervision. Mr. Main, who was the only other person with any authority, as I intimated before, had other duties requiring his time and attention which made effective supervision on his part impossible. A supervision to be effective should be active and not passive.

There were times when there was no water available because it wasn't delivered frequently enough or the receptacles would not hold sufficient. There was no effective isolation of the patients suffering from the different diseases and their attendants to avoid the carrying of infection to the others. There were other deficiencies in the way of supplies and in other respects, all of which in my opinion could, in part at least, have been avoided by an active supervision.

I now come to the last charge referred to me by your resolution (namely, that it was by reason of the conditions with which I have been dealing that the patient, Bernard Asher, came to his death). While probably the greater portion of the evidence was directed to this charge, it was to a large extent expert evidence by medical witnesses and, as is usually the case with expert testimony, there was a great diversity of opinion.

When Dr. McGibbon saw the patient on the 8th of May, he considered him on the highway to recovery; and when Mervley left on the 9th his favorable condition continued. From that time for several days he was only in charge of the attendants who, as I have stated, were not qualified nurses, and when Dr. McGibbon saw him again on the 14th his condition had materially altered for the worse. It is very hard to say what occurred during that time which may have affected his condition, or when the change for the worse actually began because the attendants, by reason of their lack of experience and knowledge, may have failed to appreciate some circumstances which would have been indicative of much to an experienced nurse or a medical man.

It is shown to my satisfaction that the death was caused as charged, while, on the other hand, it is shown that conditions existed which, it is unanimously agreed, should not be present because of the danger of evil consequences and which, therefore, might have had some effect in this case.

I have not indeed come to any conclusion from the evidence as to what was the cause of the relapse or complications which resulted in the boy's death, and since there is no question of determining civil liability or fixing criminal responsibility, I can see no good purpose in my attempting to do so since I have found the material facts showing a condition from which evil consequences might very likely follow. The probability of even possibility of such consequences, even without actuality, is a sufficient justification for a remedy.

THE KOLAPORE CUP.

Again the Rajah of Kolapore's Imperial Challenge Cup has been won by Canada. By a score of 729 the Canadian team surpassed Royal Guernsey, the Malay States, the mother country and India.

The Imperial Challenge Cup presented by the Rajah of Kolapore is one of the most prized trophies at Bisleigh Camp. It is open to teams of eight, one team from volunteers from the mother country, one team from the militia local forces or volunteers from Canada, Australia or any British colony, and one team from the members of the India staff corps here or leave. A special silver bowl is given by the National Rifle association to the captain adjutant and each member of the victorious team. To the team, exclusive of the mother country team, which makes the highest aggregate score in the competition, a special prize of 80 pounds, known as the "Colonial prize" is given.

The Kolapore Cup has been won by Canadian teams in 1872, 1875, 1881, 1884, 1889, 1896 and 1905.

Kolapore Team.

The men chosen to shoot for the Kolapore Challenge Cup today were:—Sergeant Major Caven, Staff-Sergeant Hayhurst, Staff-Sergeant Kerr, Sergeant Nichols, Lieutenant Semple, Private Smith, Captain Skedden, Corporal Youhill. The distances are 200, 500 and 600 yards, seven shots at each distance. Time limit, one hour.

ALDERMEN IN

A QUANDRY

Tackle the Judge's Report. Give up and Adopt it

Each with a copy of Judge Harvey's report in his hand, the members of the council made a feeble attempt to discuss the finding of the learned judge in the Isolation Hospital inquiry last night.

It was quite apparent that the majority of them would much rather have talked about the weather or any other old thing. They appeared in the same position as the Irish coachman who when asked by his master how near the brink of the precipice he could drive the carriage, replied that if he had his own way, he would keep as far away as possible.

Ald. Griesbach said that an examination of the report would show that the judge considered three charges. The first one concerned the hospital accommodation materials. On this charge the judge found that the accommodation was absolutely unfit for the purpose for which it was used, and held the charge to be substantiated.

The second charge dealt with the negligence and incompetency of the nurses. This was not proved.

The third charge concerned the supervision which the judge found was insufficient and this charge was proven.

The question was how did this affect the responsibility of the council? "Who is to blame?" said the alderman. "In my opinion the executive part of the government of this city is to blame."

With regard to the supervision charge there was an implication that the medical health officer of the city should be sufficiently paid to allow him to give his whole time to the work. Here again it was the maladministration of the city's executive that was to blame. The public could not lay the blame upon the council.

Ald. Calhoun thought the Attorney General should be instructed to find out how the boy came to his death.

Commissioner Kinnaird asked Ald. Griesbach how and where he found warrant for such conclusions from the judge's language, and upon what ground the alderman held the two charges proven. Mr. Kinnaird thought the judge had never lived in a tent and had peculiar ideas of tent life, and hence it could be easily understood why he (the judge) should imagine these things about a tent.

Ald. Griesbach and Calhoun moved to adopt the report. "What does adopting the report mean?" interrogated Ald. Latta. "There is no use in me trying to read this."

"I see nothing in the report to adopt," said Ald. Bellamy.

"It does not mean anything in my opinion," said Ald. Griesbach. So they adopted the report.

Eight years ago the acreage under oats was 35,864 acres. Today the acreage is 22,923.

The acreage under barley has increased from 8,712 to 75,678 in the last eight years.

In 1898 there were 3440 acres sown with winter wheat compared with 43,661 acres in 1905.

ALBERTA WOOL HARVEST
(Northwest Farmer)

The Alberta wool crop will total about 400,000 pounds from the ranges. Edmonton mills will consume the local supply and it is not large in volume nor of the sort chiefly in demand with woolen buyers, so it is not of importance in affecting or fixing prices. The range stuff on the other hand, is all better than cross-breed, and is invaluable in the manufacture of a good class of tweeds and of ladies' dress goods.

The sheep wintered well and have a good crop of wool of sound consistent fibre and is commended by the buyers for its cleanliness and quality. Messrs. Kendry and Seigel, who bought most of last year's crop are back again, and have secured over half the Alberta range clip, and are bidders in some not closed for. As was expected, prices ruled somewhat higher than last year, but not to the extent expected. Last year the bulk of Alberta wool sold at about sixteen and a sixteen. This year it has run off at about sixteen and a half cents. Little of the Saskatchewan clip has been disposed of so far, as shearing is rather late. Though it includes a larger portion of coarser or medium grade, it is not improbable that the last sellers will have a shade the better in price.

THE HORSE MARKET
(Northwest Farmer)

Not in the memory of many living has there been such a universal scarcity of horses in proportion to the demand as exists at present. We in the West are prone sometimes to think that we are unique in this particular. Perhaps the rapid agricultural and railway development in this country has so increased the demand as to make the relative scarcity rather more acute than in most other places; but horses are scarce all over the world.

An American exchange, speaking of the horse market in Iowa, says, "An attempt to stem the tide of the horse market in Iowa, says, horses have been brought to Iowa and other states from the ranges of South Dakota and Nebraska, and have sold as real drivers. An animal that would have sold a year ago for $40 to $50 now brings $100, if he can strike any pace above that of a walk, and real horses are not sold for less than $200."

In Great Britain, and, in fact, throughout all Europe, a similar condition prevails. Horses are scarce and in strong demand at high prices. The English trade in horses, both import and export, has been unusually active; and the most noticeable thing about it is that the amount of money involved has increased out of all proportion to the increase in the number of horses that have been exchanged.

In addition to the horses that will be needed for agricultural purposes, provision must be made to meet the requirements of railway construction. The present extraordinary activity in railway circles is not the mere accident of a day, but must in the very nature of things continue for many years to come; we have a few thousand miles of railways yet to build before we have things just as we want them. And railways have not yet done with horses even when they are built; but they themselves, require large numbers of horses for the handling of freight at terminals. It has been the experience of all countries, that the building of railways has increased—instead of diminishing, as was at first expected—the demand for horses for draft purposes. Railway construction, too, is nearly always followed by increased industrial and commercial activity, which in turn reacts upon the horse market.

It is altogether probable, it is all but inevitable, that we shall have in Western Canada for some time, a demand for draft horses that will be well in advance of the supply.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENT COUNCIL.

Agricola, June 14.—The meeting of the council of L. I. D. No. 27 R. 4 was held in the school house at Agricola on the above date at 3 p.m., present: Councillors Fawcett, Stevens, Sarkey and Davis.

The minutes of previous meeting of May 12 were read and by motion of Davis and Stevens, adopted.

Communications from the provincial treasurer, Department of Public Works, Hon. A. C. Rutherford, the land commissioner of the C. P. R. Co. and the Western Canada Land Co. were read and discussed.

The report of the board of trustees of the school district was kindly consented to allow the council the use of the school free, providing the caretaker was paid for attending the meetings.

The account of the Massey-Harris Co.

amounting to $78 for scraper supplies, was, by motion of Lackey and Davis, ordered paid.

On motion of Councillors Davis and Lackey, the secretary was instructed to credit Mr. John Whitson with $8 for work performed in Division No. 4, in the year 1904.

On motion of Councillors Stevens and Lackey, the secretary was authorized to draw on the treasury for the balance of salary due him from the year 1905.

T On motion of Councillors Stevens and Lackey the secretary was instructed to apply to the department for an appropriation of $100 to be applied in completing the grade across the slough between sections 15 and 16, Township 53, Range 22, west of 4th.

Motion by Lackey-Davis, that the secretary request the department to build a bridge across the creek between the 17th and 18th Township, 53-22, the present bridge being in an unsafe condition.

On motion of Councillors Stevens and Lackey that the secretary be instructed to notify the department that the bridge across Rutherford creek on the 14th base line, north of 52-24 is in need of re-planking and to require that the same be repaired. Also that the bridge crossing the ravine between Section 22 and 27 Twp. 53-25 be repaired in a similar manner.

On motion of Fawcett-L. I. D. Sec. 27, October 16th, was decided upon at the date of the next meeting.

R. Harrison, Sec.-Treasurer.

Strathcona, July 24.—T. S. Young, of the Plaindealer staff, came into town on the late train, last night, from Alberta and Morley, Alta., where he spent his vacation.

J. C. Crawford, came into town from the south, where he had gone to purchase horses, he and partners have decided to purchase a bunch of three hundred horses for the Northern Alberta market.

N. McLellan, who lately returned to town from the Pacific province, is making preparations to leave for the coast again, in a few days, owing to Mrs. McLellan's ill-health.

Alderman Douglas has received a telegram from Dr. McIntyre, M.P., advising him of the fact that the G. T. P. will cross the river at Clover Bar and not touch Strathcona.

J. H. Crawford, an ex-Wellington county farmer, has been in town some little time. Mr. Crawford has invested considerably in Alberta real estate and has much faith in the immediate future of this province.

Mr. Fletcher, horse dealer, has gone south to the U. S. for another consignment of American horses. Mr. Fletcher was so successful with his last import bunch that he has made another venture.

Contractor J. M. Eaton went down to Leduc on business on the 4 p.m. train.

Wm. Weeks, of Crawford &amp; Weeks, real estate, went south on the 4 p.m. train enroute for Brampton, Ont., on a two months' holiday to visit the home and friends of his boyhood.

J. Galloway, a business man of Grey county, Ont., came to town last night. He reports business and crop prospects good in that part of Ontario. He has come up to visit friends and look over the province. He is no stranger in Alberta as he was up here last year. Mr. Galloway notes with pleasure the country's expansion since his last visit west.

Mayor Sheppard is home again from Gull Lake, where he went to visit his family, who are holidaying there.

Mr. Embler, an ex-farmer of Wellington county, Ont., has sold out his eastern property and has come west to stay. He has been in the Saskatchewan district and reports that real estate is held very high in that town. He is of opinion that there will be financial trouble there are long among speculators and prefers to invest in this locality.

J. G. Tipton has gone to Calgary on business in connection with the firm. He will on his return trip remain for a time at Lacombe and Gull Lake in the interests of the firm.

Miss Sadie Hall of Fort William, who has been visiting Mrs. Tipton and other Strathcona friends, has returned to the east.

Aldermen MacFarland, Cowles and Richards, are out of town, the former at Winnipeg on business, and the two latter at Cooking Lake on a pleasure trip.

S. H. Burns, the east end barber, left on the 4 p.m. C. &amp; E. south bound train enroute for the Winnipeg fair.

The Foster Bros., who have been a few days in town, have returned to their large ranch on the Pembina. They have good reports of that district.

In the Mountains of Alberta

(Special Correspondence of the Toronto Globe.)

Laggan, Alta., July 11.—Imagine a sheet of water a mile and a half long and about half as broad, of a robin's egg blue in color for the most part, but showing all the hues of the rainbow as the sunlight glances on it off the glacial mountain that lies across the head of the lake. On either hand rise the snowy peaks of tall giants of the Rockies, and at the foot is a charming Swiss chalet, with terraces sloping down to the blue water, terraces which a Chinese landscape gardener is even now laying out in flower plots and walks, for it is all new, so to speak, the chalet having been the tiniest affair only until within the last year or two. The Oriental gardener tells us that he is going to sow the terraces with "glass," and adds his conviction that the "glass will glow velvety well there." We understand in time to check an involuntary exclamation of surprise at such original husbandry. Out from the foot of the lake issues a mountain torrent, the Louise River, which throws itself tumultuously over the highest rocks and down into the deepest gorges. The blue of the lake is quickly lost, and the waters of the river foam and whiten as they dash past all barriers in their mad descent to mingle with the current of the Bow, three miles beyond and a thousand feet below. The passengers alighting at Laggan for the chalet begin their pleasures here with a delightful drive along the winding and precipitous banks of this raging but romantic stream. The drive brings them to the chalet and the scene I have attempted to describe, but an adequate idea of the beauty of which I could not hope to convey. Most of the passengers are Americans who come into Canada over the Sealt line at Moose Jaw, and are stopping at Banff, Laggan and Glacier on their way to the coast, then down to California or to Seattle and back east.

Not many Canadians come here. Apart from the Americans the visitors to Laggan are principally globe trotters from Great Britain and the continent. The conveyance that took us from the station contained two Germans, two Russians and four Americans among its ten passengers. The driver was a young Englishman, who, becoming eloquent over the beauties of the neighborhood, assured us that when he first climbed Saddleback the scene that opened out before him was so marvellous that he wondered how he had lived so long without seeing it. Saddleback is a mountain to the east named from its shape; it may be climbed by the aid of a guide, and from its heights you may look across an abyssal gorge two thousand feet deep to the avalanches of Mount Temple, the forested vale called Paradise Valley, the scarred battlements of Mount Shiel, and the pinnacles of Castle Crag. Just why Canadians do not come in greater numbers to Laggan and the Lakes in the Clouds it is hard to say. Most of them no doubt think they have seen the National Park when they have seen Banff, but Banff is only an introductory chapter, as it were, to the beauties of this sister retreat, which is still within the park limits. Laggan has been little advertised, it is true, because there has been little accommodation here for the travelling public. The only hotel is the Swiss chalet mentioned, which is conducted by the C. P. R., and the growing patronage of the spot of late has necessitated almost a yearly enlargement.

There are three "lakes in the clouds" here at Laggan. The first encountered is Lake Louise, which lies at the door of the chalet; the second is Mirror Lake, which lies a thousand feet higher, and yet a third is Lake Agnes, a few hundred feet higher yet. The best known of the three to Canadians, though by hearsay rather than observation, is the first named, Lake Louise, named, of course, after the King's sister, who was here as wife of the then Governor-General when the lake was first introduced to the world. The glacial mountain that confronts you at the far end of the lake is Mount Victoria, with vast fields of ice held there in perpetuity over eleven thousand feet above sea level. There is an appalling perpendicular cliff under the ice fields. You know it must be terrific in its height, for the mountain, though in the rarified atmosphere it seems so near, is at least ten miles away, but you can hardly resist a shudder when you find the wall is two-thirds of a mile high, and the snow upon the top, caked into solid ice, melting and reforming with the seasons throughout these thousands of years, which seems to the untrained eye perhaps a score of feet thick, is a vast mass two hundred feet in depth. Even with the naked eye cracks may be seen in these great ice fields, which at a near view, if one could obtain it, would become awful crevasses, allowing the splitting off from time to time of a stupendous mass, the report of which echoes through the valley like the report of a thousand guns. Over the precipice it goes, down over the wall of 3,500 feet and lands on the moraine below, another vast ice field, the surface of which is more or less discolored by an admixture of clay, and which the casual observer does not at first realize is a veritable ocean of ice, several miles across and hundreds of feet thick. It is from this moraine that Lake Louise draws its waters, the deep blue color obtained being that common to glacial lakes, and caused by the suspension of innumerable infinitesimal particles near the surface, particles ever renewed as they descend with the stream that pour from above. With the melting of the glacier, that begins early in July and continues throughout August, the stream coming from the ice brings a strain of clay with it that gives a milky coloring to the lake where it enters.

Vegetation is abundant all round the lake, and the air is heavy with the odors of pine and balsam and of countless wild flowers, gorgeous in color and infinite in variety. Perhaps that which most attracts the eye is the tall fireweed, of brilliant show tall, straight trunks, which rising one over another in countless thousands form forests that are not unworthy of the grand scale on which all nature here is cast.

The chalet itself is puny indeed compared with the wonders around and except for the well-made government road that leads to it is practically the only visible sign of human handiwork or habitation—practically because there is at least one tent-dweller in the vicinity. Further building is of course discouraged—the charm would disappear with the erection of a few clapboard cottages. The chalet was originally a picturesque wooded structure built in the style of the Alpine hostelry. As the patronage increased, though the increase was trivial for many years, a second wing of wood was added. Last winter the chalet was put on a more ambitious basis, and the basement and ground floor of a fine stone building were erected, on which three other stories will be placed this winter. This will then constitute the centre of the building, and wings harmonious in design will be added, supplementing or replacing the original wooden structure. The stone from which the new building was erected was torn from the side of one of the neighboring mountains, and brought across the Lake Louise when it lay under an ice-coat two feet thick. The rock was so hard that half a dozen blacksmiths were kept busy sharpening the tools of the thirty quarrymen who blasted the stone out; but the building should be imperishable. The hotel is conducted by a Scotch lady, Miss Morrison, who has been with the C. P. R. for many years at the different mountain chalets of the corporation; and if the place were not a constant delight because of the natural beauties without, it would still be a fascinating retreat because of its unique interior. All is quiet and restful. The long shaded verandah, of course, looks over the pellucid waters of the lake and fronts the glacial mountain. That we have reached the region of red, whose long raceme of flowers is put forth abundantly in the desolate wastes of burnt timber lands where they pleasantly break the monotony of grey or black presented by the charred trees. There are also to be found here yellow violets and the beautiful yellow mountain columbine. Exquisite green orchids too grow along the swampy shore, though I could not find the yellow orchid, or ladies' slipper, which grows in abundance on the western edge of the prairies. The flower season is short, but while it lasts nature is unparing in her treasures. The flora is adapted to the climate in the most marvellous manner, and with the first warmth of the spring sun the leaves of the brilliant ice-poppies shoot through snow or ice-cold water, or even through solid ice itself of a thickness of four or five inches. The flora of the Rockies is still comparatively unknown, though receiving more and more general attention. Dr. Macoun, of the Geological Survey Department of Ottawa, has given it some attention from a scientific standpoint, and a hundred or so of specimens have been placed on view at the different chalets in the mountains. Mrs. Shaffer, a Philadelphia lady, has also studied it and written of it, and Mrs. Henshaw, of Vancouver, has recently produced a book descriptive of the flowers of the Rockies.

As to the trees that clothe the surrounding mountains up to the snow line, they are chiefly spruce, balsam, pine, birch and the Douglas fir. None of them attain great size at these lofty altitudes but they Chinese labor is evident from the Chinese gardener, who by the way has twelve men under him sowing his "glass," but it is a neatly uniform Chinese boy who shows you to your room, and it is a picture-quely dressed Chinaman who waits on you at table, while a sort of mandarin arrayed in blue silk is head waiter and directs the movements of his force, who move noiselessly to and fro in slipped feet on the polished floor. Needless to say, the table is daintily set, the decorations, pictures, curtains, etc., are in the best of taste. The charges, everything considered, are not unreasonable.

There is, of course, little to do but climbing some of the numerous mountain trails, the most popular and easiest being that to the foot of the Victoria glacier or those leading to the lakes up above. The highest of these lakes is Lake Agnes, which lies 1,300 feet above Lake Louise, and, as I had not time to visit it, I must take it on hearsay that its waters are green and so clear that the rough bottom can be seen at great depths. As at Lake Louise, the mountains stand around like tall sentinels and irregular peaks rise up in terraces, reaching far above the timber line, while at their base are huge heaps of moraine ice. Only the easiest climbs are taken by pedestrians; ponies are needed for the harder trails, and the most difficult are not to be undertaken without a guide.

In the evening there are a few boating parties out; not a great many, for the beautiful lake has its treacherous side, and sometimes almost instantly its waters are whitened with foam as the wind sweeps suddenly through the mountains around. Lake Louise is 600 feet deep, and its waters are icy cold, so it is well to be careful.

The contrast between the life here and that of the plains below, where I have spent a number of weeks past, is as striking as the change in the scenery. There all is work and business; the talk is of land prices and soil and crops, of railway building and city making. Here all the striving of man ceases; the talk is of the wonders of nature and their eternal significance. Man's industry and ambitions alike sink into nothingness in the presence of these terrific elemental forces. One is reminded of the impressive conversation picturesquely imagined by Turgeneff between Mont Blanc and the Jungfrau or some other neighboring peak in the Alps, for I remember only the effect of the story.

"What do you see?" asked Mont Blanc of his neighbor sometime in the ages past.

"Nearly all is white," replied the Jungfrau; "but here and there green patches are appearing, about which little black things are forever running to and fro."

Ages passed away—they were a day in the life of the giant peaks, and the question was repeated: "What do you see now?"

"There is still much white, but the green patches have spread everywhere and the little black things are innumerable and are still forever running to and fro."

"And what do you see now?" asked Mont Blanc a third time, when yet another interval had elapsed.

"The green patches have disappeared," replied the Jungfrau; "the little black things are no more to be seen. All is white and everywhere there is quiet."

Would these peaks here in Canada have a similar report to make if they whispered to each other in the sky, one wonders, or will something of their own adamant be worked into the character and fibre of the race that is peopling the plains below and enable it to endure like them the shocks of time?

How little the centuries mean to the mountains is shown by a statement made in the course of his report last year to the Dominion government by Mr. Howard J. Douglas, superintendent of the Rocky Mountain park, in which he mentions the discovery while building a new road in the vicinity of Lake Louise, of a beautiful red gorge formed by the little Pipestone river, which had "cut through the crimson rock for two thousand years, to a depth of about two hundred feet." And again in estimating the time required for the foundation of the remarkable caves discovered near Glacier, and already several times described in The Globe. Superintendent Douglas has conjectured that the period of formation at 38,500 years more than six times that of the recorded history of man.

From this same official report I notice that the total number of visitors to the Banff Park for the year 1905 was 19,888, of which about 13,000 were Canadians and 4,000 Americans. The remaining figures represent practically every country on earth. These figures are gathered chiefly from the returns of the hotels at Banff Springs. There are now half a dozen of these hotels of various qualities and prices. The charges for accommodation are not high, but the lively prices are less reasonable, and a concerted effort to lower them would undoubtedly tend to popularize the park. Not that Banff is not appreciated to the limits of its present accommodation. There were over five thousand tourists turned away last year for lack of accommodation and all the hotels have been much enlarged during the last year or two. The number of visitors from the neighboring city of Calgary is already very large, and as the population of that place grows it will doubtless supply a continually larger proportion of the patronage. It is to be noted that the Americans considerably outnumber the Canadians at the C. P. R. hotel, the most high-priced and luxurious of the Banff hostels, while they practically do not figure at the cheaper hotels right in the village. The village itself is a charming spot, lighted by electricity furnished by the Pacific Coal Company at Bankhead, a mile away, and equipped with a comfortable opera house and all the essential features of a progressive community. There is more variety in the entertainment offered the tourist at Banff than at Laggan. He may still climb, and must do so if he is to get the chief pleasures of the mountain life, but he has also at hand the sulphur baths, boating on the Bow River and back into the Vermilion and other lakes into which the river widens, and delightful walks and drives in abundance. The animal paddock, a couple of miles east of the village, is one of the most popular resorts of the visitors, doubtless because one of the few remaining herds of buffalo is found there. The herd at present numbers only 51 and is slowly increasing. Practically all the animals of the plains and mountains are represented in the paddock.

The waters of Banff are undoubtedly of the highest efficacy for healing rheumatic and kindred ailments. The Dominion government has erected a complete bathing establishment, of which the patients avail themselves at a trifling charge, and many are the wonderful cures reported, and of which you may read in rude inscriptions on boards stuck in crevices of the rocks about the hillside near the spring. Here the two examples:—

"I had to be carried up to the springs," says one; "could not even bear the motion of a carriage. I had not walked for two years, and every movement was an agony. In three weeks after coming here I walked down to Banff and in five I ran a foot race. Praise God!"

Here is the second: "Am an engineer, 37 years of age. Caught a chill six years ago. In six months was so crippled I could do no work. A year later my savings were gone, and my wife and her father supported the family. Had given up all hope of being anything but a useless wreck and a burden to my friends. A friend of mine had his sciatica cured here. He told me of it, said that Banff would cure me, and lent me $150 to come. I have been here eleven weeks, and am now perfectly well. The swelling has gone out of my wrist, knees and ankles. I stand erect without pain. I have walked unaided from Banff to the spring for my bath three times a day (a distance of ten miles, half of it uphill) for the past two weeks. I am going home to Peoria, Illinois, perfectly cured, I who never thought to take another step again. This is certainly the greatest cure in the world."

It sounds something like a patent medicine cure, but the Banff Springs belong to the Canadian people, and are controlled by the Canadian government, and there is so little object in advertising them that their medicinal value is almost unknown in the east.

Both as pleasure resort and sanatorium, therefore, the Rocky Mountain Park of Canada is capable of indefinite expansion. F.A.A.

The Oxford Hot Water Boiler takes advantage of every known scientific point which will increase the generation and distribution of heat. We have increased its power greatly by making the walls of the fire pot slant inwards above the fire. This gives a greater surface for the direct action of the rays of heat.

Oxford Hot Water Boiler

The first water section over the fire is double depth, with bell-shaped flues, which also increases the surface directly employed to the action of the heat. These are but two of the exclusive points which make the Oxford Hot Water Boiler the most economical and most efficient home-warming apparatus on the market. If you will drop us a post card, we will send you our catalogue, which explains the whole system.

THE COMING WAR

Between Great Britain and Germany.
(By Prof. L. E. HORNING, in the Toronto Globe)

Leipzig, June 18.—The coming war between Great Britain and Germany.—This may seem a startling title, but is in reality a quotation from a conversation in which the writer took part a few days ago. Two pamphlets recently published in Germany, "War in Sight" and "The German Invasion of England in 1910," show that the idea is not altogether new one there. Naturally enough one is led to inquire into the reasons why the two greatest Teutonic nations of Europe should become embroiled in war.

It would seem that first of all differences arise from the great commercial struggle going on at the present time. As everybody knows, Great Britain for the greater part of the nineteenth century held an undoubted supremacy in commerce. After the Franco-Prussian war, however, owing to the huge indemnity paid to Germany, there was an outburst of commercial prosperity and an immense increase in all kinds of manufactures, so great as to surprise the world. Moreover, this commercial activity was on the soundest basis, for everywhere it was the result of the application of scientific principles and of the lessons of scientific research, and applied with a thoroughness that leaves no doubt of the stability of the development. This scientific basis allows for no haphazard work, and prevents the mistakes made by "practical" men. More than that it provides just the element of progress which is necessary to avoid "oldfogyism," "stagnation" or whatever name may be given to unprogressiveness.

It so happened that only a few years before this date, 1870-71, the great North German Lloyd Company had been able to take advantage of the blow administered by the civil war to United States commerce, the American merchant marine having been practically destroyed by the Alabama and other privateers. This proved to all Germans that success on the sea was possible to them, and the wonderful development of this company and many others has amply justified their faith. The result is that in the last twenty-five years we find an enormous growth of German commerce to all parts of the world based on the best application of the most modern scientific methods in all departments of production. The figures representing percentage of growth are tremendous, and undoubtedly favor Germany, but it must be remembered that English commerce was already enormous before its German rival made its appearance, and, therefore, that fact is no absolute proof that England has been losing in the race.

At the same time, much concern has been shown by thoughtful public men from Lord Rosebery down at the competition of the Germans. A recent article in The London Times on the necessity of steel production and sale as a result of the rebuilding of San Francisco after the earthquake is one of the latest evidences of this concern on the part of Great Britain. There is hardly any room for doubt that England and Englishmen are slow in availing themselves of scientific progress in manufacturing lines, and it is just here that a lesson can and must be learned from the rival German, if they expect to compete on equal terms.

There is also a second point on which Germans and Britons have differences; that is, in the matter of colonies. There is room for doubt whether any other nation in the world possesses the colonizing genius of the English. The possibility of a British Imperial union for offense and defense shown by the practical results of the South African war by Canadian and Australian preferential tariffs and by the growth of the feeling of kinship between Great Britain and her colonies, so evident in the past few years, makes it all the more patent to the German that colonies are the mainstay and hope of a nation. But America is closed by the Monroe doctrine, Asia is developing a doctrine of "Asia for the Asiatics" under the leadership of Japan, backed by the British alliance, and only Africa is left to them. But here, too, the Englishman was first in the field and already had Egypt and all the south under her control, while France had the fertile fringe at the north, and there was little choice left. This second reason for differences between Great Britain and Germany is founded, then, on a jealousy, shall we say, or at any rate an unwilling acknowledgment of English supremacy.

And there is a third reason, a political one. There is no truer democratic state in the world than the United Kingdom, in spite of her ranks and nobility. Indeed, the nobility is no longer one of blood alone, which is ever most unprogressive and most impervious to new ideas, but every year sees fresh democratic blood infused into the upper classes, with the result that the aristocracy can now really be said to be a splendid type of democracy. And, however far Great Britain may be behind in scientific matters, there is no question that politically she represents a very great advance towards the democratic ideal. As such she has always been, and will continue to be, a model for all European statesmen who are striving to solve the question of constitutional liberty.

For this very reason Great Britain is regarded by the rulers and ruling classes in many States with something akin to horror, and British influence is resisted in every way. So it was with the Iron Chancellor of Germany, and so it would seem to be with their present guides in political affairs. The local and patriotic newspapers are striving in ways not always free from criticism to stir up a feeling of hostility and to create a general fear of the British Empire. Just now, owing to it, said by some such journals, to the "noiseless" visits of King Edward, a net is being woven in which Germany is to be caught. Just why such designs are attributed to our King, we cannot see, but perhaps this suspicious attitude on their part is caused by the isolation in which Germany is now finding herself and which Germans themselves clearly recognize.

These differences are not, however, emphasized as a general thing by the educated class. Nor are the heavily-burdened people of Germany likely to add to their strain by encouraging an increase to their load; they want peace. But the politicians seem heading towards war, and there is always fear of the army. It constitutes a very large non-producing class, and from enforced idleness all sorts of mischief may spring. Of course, in a country like Germany, which has no natural boundaries and which is surrounded by enemies, there seems no way of escape from the maintenance of a huge standing army. And this immense burden is daily added to by the increasing cost of a growing navy, seemingly necessary for the protection of a rapidly-increasing commerce.

But these burdens, which every year are becoming heavier, are none the less burdens because they seem necessary; and they are the cause of a very widespread feeling of unrest and dissatisfaction. This very feeling may be considered an indirect cause of the "coming war," for should that take place there will be no time for these inward troubles to develop into active discontent, and their solution will not be necessary for some time at least.

Another factor making for uneasiness is the unfortunate habit of the German Emperor of making inconsiderate speeches and sending peculiarly-worded telegrams. Now the Emperor may really be called a worthy ruler who tries to do and succeed in living up to the working ideal of a German Kaiser. But a father who is too anxious for the welfare of his family may be the unintentional cause of much heart-burning; and the case of the Emperor in relation to his people would seem to be a similar one. No wonder that the Germans in contrast to him, call King Edward "noiseless." And if a man who does not want to fight makes a habit of going out on the streets and proclaiming that he knows how to defend himself, he will be very likely soon to get into the fight he ostensibly wished to avoid. So with the Emperor and the army and the patriotic public journals of Germany, as they cry peace, and still keep loudly proclaiming, "We are ready for war."

Let us look now at the other side. One of the greatest forces making for continued peace is a growing internationalism of sentiment. The world is bound together in all parts now as never before, and the brotherhood of man is a world ideal. Especially is this true of the workers in all departments, and the workers will or ought to decide, Germans have heavy burdens, and British experience in South Africa has shown that war burdens grow apace. Certainly the main bodies of both people do not wish for such a war. The successful visit of representative German municipal officers to England and the proposed visit of the journalists will do a great deal to foster amity. Moreover, the new Foreign Secretary declared lately in the Reichstag that England and Germany were no longer estranged.

And, supposing such a war were declared, where would the conflict take place? Great Britain could well afford to say, "Come over to us!" and—well, how? Ay, there's the rub! Britain's superiority on the sea is still unquestioned, and, notwithstanding the fact that the German navy is increasing, the British navy is not only keeping pace, but is increasing faster. This is the weak point in Germany's position, and this it is which must give pause.

And there is no doubt as to the practical isolation of Germany at the present time. Weaker on the sea and alone on land, what would she gain by a war? Rather she would lose all, and that she cannot afford, nor would we wish it for her. Germany stands in the world for the best in education and science. As the leader in these fields she is doing and has yet to do a most noble work. Let us all hope that brother will not war with brother, but rather, laying aside the implements of war, hand-in-hand go on to the peaceful conquest of the world.

TRANSCONTINENTAL PEDESTRIAN.

(From the Regina Standard.)

A Scotchman of surprising height, tanned to the red brown of the native, and with the free and easy bearing of the outdoor man, strode into the editorial sanctum this morning and announced himself as J. H. Gillis, from North Sydney, N.S., outward bound on Shank's Pony for Vancouver, and due to return on foot to his home in the Atlantic seaboard by Feb. 1, next or pay forfeit on a wager of $1,200. The progress of Mr. Gillis has been chronicled by the Canadian press as he has steadily pushed onward through thickly populated Nova Scotia and Quebec, bisecting Ontario, traversing the difficult North Shore country and debouching from Winnipeg on to the free and rolling prairie. He is 6 feet 4½ inches tall, weighed 195 pounds when he left home and now scales some 12 pounds less though he is looking fit and none the worse for the 2,700 odd miles he has already traversed. He carries with him note books containing official stamps of points he passes through, generally counter-signed by the station agent for the Canadian Pacific in the silver thread he is following across the continent.

"And how do you stand now as to time?" he was asked.

"Well I am quite a bit behind owing to about six weeks' trouble with sore feet which developed after I had been a month on the road. I left on Feb. 1, and have to get back within a year or lose the wager. I started penniless and the condition is that I may make my way from the proceeds of these post cards at ten cents a crack." Mr. Gillis here produced some of the cards in question, bearing a cut and the following legend: "J. H. Gillis, transcontinental pedestrian from North Sydney, N.S., to Vancouver, B.C., and return within a year. Distance 7,680 miles."

"The rate we are making now," he went on, "is pretty good and if I can keep up an average of 27 or 28 miles a day I shall do it all right."

TEA AND THE JAPANESE.

"With us," says Charles Edward Russell in "Soldiers of the Common Good," in the August Everybody's, "Japan has covenanted at our earnest request that she will not subsidize certain industries—for instance, tea export. Some years ago she set apart an annual appropriation for the Japanese Tea Guild. Subsidy! Not at all, said the Japanese government, nothing in the way of a subsidy. It was merely to advertise Japanese teas, advertisement having been made necessary by the serious and growing competition of Ceylon and Assam teas. I am told that about one per cent. of the money was actually used for advertising. The rest went to pay the expenses of branch tea houses opened in New York, Boston, Montreal, Chicago and elsewhere. Why were these branch houses desired? Because for years foreign firms, chiefly American, had possessed the transporting trade of Japan, and the government was determined to secure that trade for Japanese interests. Foreign governments protested at Tokyo. They wasted their time. With that faultless politeness that is one of the charming traits of the Japanese, the government officials gave assurance of their most distinguished consideration—and renewed the appropriation. It lapsed while the war was on, because Japan had need elsewhere for all her funds; but now the government has in hand an act that will finish the work begun by the appropriation and effectively put the foreign tea houses out of business."

The One Right Steel Plate Range

Until we found out just the right way to use asbestos to keep the heat in a cooking range where it must cook the food instead of cooking the cook, every steel-plate range kept the kitchen broiling-hot. This range is a cool range—the top shield and lining is thick asbestos, so the heat stays inside the range and keeps even evenly hot. Food is better cooked, quicker cooked and cooked for less fuel-cost.

For Cleanly Cookery OXFORD CHANCELLOR BURNS WOOD OR COAL

Everything about it is cleanly—empty the ash-pit without fluffing ashes over everything; feed-pouch takes fuel without clutter and muss. Fuel does more cooking because this range has the right draft-control—sensitive, easily-governed—bringing a fire up quick, cool it down quick.

AN EDMONTON MAN ABROAD

Mr. R. V. Bellamy, son of Ald. Bellamy, and Alberta Rhodes scholar at Oxford is at present touring along the Rhine, and writing from Alzey, Germany, says:

The course of my travels has at last brought me to the Rhine, and led me among scenes that for natural and artificial beauty are unsurpassed. Journeying through Belgium, a flat and uninteresting country, I arrived at Herethall on the German frontier, where I had to do with some very imposing looking customs officials. These military-looking individuals decided that I might go on, and I was soon on the way to Cologne. German railways are not remarkable for speed but are tolerably well appointed and give a good service. It was dusk when I arrived in Cologne, but despite that fact I determined to have a look at the famous cathedral. Its famous outlines could be but indistinctly seen in the twilight, and gave but a slight idea of the beauty that stood revealed on the following morning. The style of architecture is strictly Gothic, and the edifice is replete with the most wonderful and graceful stonework. The two huge towers at the west end are over 500 feet in height.

Leaving Cologne I travelled to Bonn at whose university many of the German aristocrats are educated. There I boarded a steamboat for the voyage up the Rhine as far as Bingen—a trip of about ten hours. I soon found that I was by no means the only Anglo-Saxon on board. In fact, the majority of the passengers were English-speaking people and among these the American tourist type, chiefly represented by sun-burnt shirt-waisted females, was most evident.

Scarcely had we left Bonn when the most lively scenery greeted us. The vine-covered banks rose steeply up from the water's edge, while at frequent intervals jagged cliffs stood out in bold relief, crowned either with the ruins of some ancient castle or with a modern mansion. It is not to be wondered at that the romantic beauty of the Rhine has so excited the praises of poets and has appealed so powerfully to the imagination of the German people. Byron wrote as follows:

"The castled crag of Drachenfels
Frowns o'er the wide and winding
Rhine,
Whose breast of waters broadly swells
Between the banks which bear this vine,
And hills all rich with blossomed trees,
And hills which promise corn and wine,
And scattered cities crowning these.
Whose far white walls among them
shine,
Have strewn a scene . . ."

It was interesting to note the method of cultivating the vine. It seems that grapes thrive best on slopes that are exposed to the full rays of the sun, and so one may see almost perpendicular cliffs along the Rhine carefully terraced and planted with vines. These are planted in rows and trained up supports and are now allowed to grow more than three or four feet in height. I suppose that a few acres of vineyard involves as much culture as a 500 acre farm. At Coblenz we had an excellent view of the imposing monument to Emperor William I. Here our numbers were augmented by a party of young Germans, men and women, evidently out on a lark. For three or four hours they sat drinking wine and chattering and laughing gaily, so that the air was full of "Prose" and German gutters. By the time we reached the famous Lorelei, they were not at all sober, and sang Heine's song with great gusto. The Lorelei, of course, is famous in song and story, and a modern writer insists that although that siren of the cliffs has vanished, her charm remains in the bright bright glances of the maidens of the Rheinland, and dwells upon their rosy lips. However, as regards this statement, I will not hear express my opinion.

Towards evening we arrived at Bingen, where our German friends saluted the Denkmals commemorating the war of 1870-1871 with patriotic fervor, and I disembarked.

New City Cement Mixer Goes into Dry Dock.

ship, but granting such a request was a dangerous precedent. The request was refused.

At this stage the proceedings became a little lively. Ald. Calhoun asked if the money bylaws soon to be voted on had ever been published. Commissioner Kinnaird replied they had been published in the Saturday News. Ald. Griesbach asked why they had not been published in the daily newspapers of the city. Mr. Kinnaird's reason was that he wished to distribute the patronage of the city. In order to give the bylaws greater publicity Ald. Griesbach and Calhoun moved that the bylaws be published once in each of the city dailies. Ald. Bellamy objected on the ground of economy. He thought the citizens never read the bylaws anyway. The motion carried.

Ald. Calhoun then wished to ask Commissioner Hargreaves some questions. Ald. Calhoun—"Has the city a cement mixer?"

Com. Hargreaves—"Yes."
Q—"Has it been working?"
Ans—"I do not think so."
Q—"Has the city tried to work it?"
Ans—"It is reported they do not understand it."
Q—"Have those who sold it been asked to work it?"
Ans—"Yes."
Q—"Is it paid for?"
Ans—"Yes."

At this point Ald. Bellamy said he had asked the City Engineer why it did not work. He could not tell, so Mr. Hargreaves had written the manufacturers of the machine.

Mr. Fawcett, the contractor, informed the council that he saw seven experts try to make the machine work and had spent $20 trying to operate, and at last gave it up.

To this statement Ald. Bellamy saw it operated by a man who was no expert.

Ald. Calhoun's rejoinder was, "The people who bought the machine are not experts," to which A. W. Bellamy retorted, "Ald. Calhoun does not know what he is talking about."

After passing a motion to put the machine up in a shed, this little altercation was over.

Mr. Jack Fletcher asked for the privilege to conduct a lunch wagon on the streets, supplying sandwiches, coffee and pie, etc. The request was not granted, so Edmontonians will have to rely upon the restaurants.

The report of the engineer re supplementary sewer up McDougall along Rice, and down Namay was adopted.

Also the engineer's report that 400 bbls of cement is necessary to repair the walks that require immediate repair, which amounts to 11 per cent of the total walks. The price is $4.50 a bul.

Bylaw 68 repealing Bylaw 60 and amending Bylaw No. 21 was read and finally passed.

Ald. Bellamy brought up the question of the condition of the city's streets. He said, "Our streets are an open disgrace. We have an army of men. What are they doing? The streets are dangerous to a horse at night."

Ald. Calhoun thought there were too many foremen.

On motion of Bellamy and Calhoun the commissioners will report at next meeting the number of men in the city's employ, their wages, and the number of foremen on the list.

With the discussion of the report of Judge Harvey the council adjourned.
